Project aims:

This is a dynamic blog web page. To provide a place to write a diary and record their own stories. And it is also a social media which could be used to make friend via Internet and exchange knowledge.

Approach:

I will be using html/css to implement front, while using php as backend to operate data which store in mysql, at the same time javascript will also be used to add some features for home page. In the process, mysql will be eucapsulated to operate function which could make development more effective.
